

PREPARING FOR 2021

THREAT & VULNERABILITY ASSESSMENTS

IGNORING VULNERABILITIES INCREASES RISK.

Physical and cyber security are the biggest threats organizations face today. It is also the one where we see the largest gap between threat and preparedness. While some companies are devoting significant resources to the problem, many are playing catch-up.

In fact, 63% of companies said their data was potentially compromised within the last twelve months due to a security breach, costing an average of $3.92 million per breach.¹ In PwC's 23rd Annual CEO Survey, 53% of U.S. CEOs are "extremely concerned" with the effect of cyber threats on growth prospects. Knowing that a problem exists is only half the battle; fixing that problem is the other half.²

THREAT & VULNERABILITY ASSESSMENT BENEFITS.

Fortaris Capital Partners has the expertise in business intelligence and corporate security, as well as the latest technological resources, to develop a comprehensive Threat & Vulnerability Assessment (TVA) to assist in protecting employees, physical assets and digital information from a security crisis. Just as companies seek outside expertise for legal and financial matters, never before has it been more important for companies to seek expert advice in physical and cyber security.

A TVA provides a detailed outline and assessment of the risks facing an organization including risks of violence, theft, fraud, cyber and other security threats and their potential impact on your business. Areas of focus include:

- Employee & Vendor Security
- Inventory & Supply Chain Security
- IT Security
- Surveillance Systems
- Access Controls
- Incident Monitoring & Reporting
- Community Crime Analysis
- Training

The result is a comprehensive corporate security program including crisis prevention, risk mitigation plans, crisis management and recovery.

ASSESSING THREATS IS AN ONGOING PROCESS.

The implications of a compromised security crisis are far reaching and can result in the loss of revenue, profit and reputation.
